State Normal School Bulletin, 1899-1909 (Classic Reprint) Dec 28 2020 Excerpt from State Normal School Bulletin, 1899-1909 The beautiful plat of the School of the future was drawn by Mr. Charles W. Leavitt, Jr., the distinguished landscape architect of New York, who drew also the plans of The Greater University. Again the School is indebted to its good friends for the means to defray this expense, and to Mr. Leavitt and Prof. C. M. Strahan for their generous part in the matter. Of course all these good things cannot come to the School at once; but, as these details become possible year by year, no new building or accessory need be out of keeping with a harmonious scheme of development. The Normal School is so intimately and fundamentally related to the common schools of the state that the Legislature can well afford to hurry along its proper functioning. The Rural School Messenger, Vol. 7 May 01 2021 Excerpt from The Rural School Messenger, Vol. 7: November, 1917 Missal Uel W. Lamkin is Chairman of this committee. Participating in this investigation and study is the State Department of Education, the State Teachers' Association, the state educational institutions, and the Missouri colleges. The Editor has the honor of representing this normal school in this study. We bespeak for. This effort to better the rural school situation in Missouri the same hearty and sympathetic cooperation that has been accorded our committee in this Sanitary Survey. The work of changes in it; the social and economic conditions, and the other problems that are engrossing the attention of thoughtful students of country life and education. The rural schools of Missouri have made wonderful progress in the past few years. May we not hope from the attention they are receiving that they may soon take rank second to none in the Union? The Way We Do School Feb 22 2023 The Way We Do School: The Making of Oakland's

Full-Service Community School District offers an in-depth profile of the nation's most ambitious community school initiative. The book focuses on a nearly ten-year effort to transform all eighty-six district schools in Oakland, California into community schools in order to better meet the academic and personal needs of all students. Based on six years of research, the authors detail the implementation of the effort at both the district and school levels. Their work covers the detailed, community-wide planning process, the policy "levers" for system change, and the organizational shifts and other tools that were employed. Under extraordinarily difficult conditions, Oakland's Community Schools, Thriving Students initiative spurred system change at both central office and school levels. Though still a work-in-progress, the initiative's "whole-child approach" has resulted in positive outcomes for students and for the district. In addition, several elements of Oakland's full-service community schools (FSCS) work have been recognized nationally including the African American Male Achievement program, its district partnership model, and its restorative justice and social-emotional learning practices. The Way We Do School illustrates how the implementation of Oakland's full-service community school initiative and its remarkable stability over time provide many lessons for the community school field and most especially for policy makers and practitioners interested in launching a district-led FSCS system.

Absent from School Nov 26 2020 In Absent from School, Gottfried and Hutt offer a comprehensive and timely resource for educators and policy makers seeking to understand the scope, impact, and causes of chronic student absenteeism. The editors present a series of studies by leading researchers from a variety of disciplines that address which students are missing school and why, what roles schools themselves play in contributing to or offsetting patterns of absenteeism, and ways to assess student attendance for purposes of school accountability. The contributors examine school-based initiatives that focus on a range of issues, including transportation, student health, discipline policies, and protections for immigrant students, as well as interventions intended to improve student attendance. Only in the past two or three years has chronic absenteeism become the focus of attention among policy makers, civil rights advocates, and educators. Absent from School provides the first critical, systematic look at research that can inform and guide those who are working to ensure that every child is in school and learning every day.

History and Prospectus Feb 10 2022 Excerpt from History and Prospectus: Tennessee School for the Blind The reader of the succeeding pages can not fail to be impressed by one remarkable and gratifying fact, viz., that charity, like science and mechanics, has experienced a remarkable advance in the last quarter of a century; and, also, that no class, among the many dependent or defective classes, has made such rapid strides to independence of charitable assistance as the blind people of the United States. There was a time when the blind were regarded and treated as mendicants; when, in Europe they begged at the church-doors, while in the United States they went from house to house seeking alms. The evolution from mendicancy to self-support was not made at a single bound, but by slow stages. At any rate, the asylum was made an abode for the blind after the blind ceased to be mendicants and long before they had solved the problem of self-help. There is no nobler charity than that which leads a dependent class to independence of want by qualifying them for positions in which they can earn an adequate and honorable support. By this process they become free men and free women. Having, then, clearly shown their ability to support themselves, the blind have the same right to education that their more fortunate fellows With sight enjoy. The schools, therefore, for the blind should not be overlooked; for they not only give an education to their inmates, but they open a sure and safe way to self-supporting employment. The High-School Library (Classic Reprint) Sep 24 2020 Excerpt from The High-School Library Present position. - Libraries in high schools are not new, but a widespread change in teaching methods in recent years has brought them into increased importance. This change has called upon the pupil to do work in the laboratory instead of watching demonstrations by a teacher, and to do collateral and supplementary reading in preparing for recitations instead of depending more or less exclusively upon prescribed textbooks, In proportion as the change has affected individual schools, especially in the departments of English and history, the library work of the students has been increased. Public libraries have long served high-school teachers and students in their increasing demands with varying degrees of mutual satisfaction. But schools in which library work has become highly developed have found the ordinary forms of public-library service inadequate to the new needs; and although in many cases, for one reason or another, it will doubtless continue to be advisable or expedient for an outside library to act as substitute for a library in the school building, it is nevertheless increasingly recognized that, in the words of a state superintendent of public instruction, "No really good high school is possible without at least a fair library equipment," This equipment may be administered by the school or by the public library. In the very small school it may mean a few picked books bought or borrowed by the school, kept in a classroom, and cared for by a teacher. The Relationship Between the Library and the Public Schools: Reprints of Papers and Addresses In response to what seems to be a general demand, this first volume of the series has been devoted to the relations between the library and the school. Upon the reception accorded to it will depend the further continuance of the enterprise. I desire to acknowledge the kind advice and assistance of library - school authorities, and in particular the aid of Miss Effie L. Power, Supervisor of Children's work in the St. Louis Public Library, which has been of great value in the selection and grouping of the material. The High School Course in English (Classic Reprint) Mar 31 2021 Excerpt from The High School Course in English While the plan of the work has been made as flexible as possible in order to adapt it to different schools, it has seemed desirable to indicate definitely how all of the details of the course should be organized and what methods should be used to bring about the required results. The object has been to consider the purpose of each part of the English work, and to show as specifically as possible what must be done and to some extent how it must be done to accomplish this purpose. By having a definite aim for each year's work and by seeing clearly what is to be accomplished in each part of the subject, the teacher of English feels responsible for the successful completion of a specific part of the course. At the same time the originality and ability of the teacher need not be hampered by a definite plan but may be exercised in adapting the work to different conditions in different schools and classes. In discussing the course in English, the general aim and methods in teaching the important elements, composition and reading, are taken up first, and then the particular phases of each subject to be presented in each year, are considered. What is presented under the general topics, reading and composition, therefore, applies to the work of each year unless otherwise stated, and usually is not repeated in considering each year of the course. The Country School (Classic Reprint) May 21 2020 Excerpt from The Country School This book is in no sense a history of education, but is an attempt to present intimately and clearly the salient features of the schools of the last century in their more picturesque and poetic aspects. I do not deal with theories or ideals or technical details, but portray those things which linger in the memory of whoever has attended such schools. The charm of the old school days never wears off - and it is the charm that dwells in ones remembrance, even if there was some bitter mixed with the sweet. My endeavor has simply been to make this mystic and delectable past alive once more. The material is not a compilation from other books, but is based entirely on personal experiences, in part my own, but more largely those of friends and acquaintances. Some of these friends and acquaintances are no longer living, and the reminiscences of the earlier schools with which they supplied me it would be difficult again to duplicate. Sunday-School Teacher-Training (Classic Reprint) Feb 16 2020 Excerpt from Sunday-School Teacher-Training Y day and by night it is the thought of the great host Of American Sunday-school teachers, many of whom I know and all Of whom I love, that comforts and cheers me in my work. If one can help at all to solve the problem that confronts and hinders them, it will be labor well spent. And behind these teachers now teaching is another even greater host. It is the young people of the church who are to teach and train when we are gone. What can be done for them? If teacher-training means much to the teacher at work, it means much more to the young man or woman whose life work is yet to begin. Boston Cooking School Cook Book Nov 14 2019 Clearly written, extremely thorough volume revolutionized cooking in the 19th century, with hundreds of recipes ranging from baked goods, soups, salads, cakes and sauces to pastries, pies, poultry, fish and meat. Ground-breaking, culinary encyclopedia elevated cooking and related activities to an art form that could be practiced by even the most inexperienced homemaker. "Glimpse the culinary delights of the past with this wonderful cookbook. . . . This book is a treat for anyone who enjoys cooking or Americana."—Victorian Decorating & Lifestyle.

The Continuation School in the United States (Classic Reprint) Apr 19 2020 Excerpt from The Continuation School in the United States First, it indicates that the schools in the upper grades fail to meet the enlarged needs and interests of the great majority of the young people to whom it may be reasonably expected that they should minister. Secondly, it indicates that the greatest proportionate withdrawal, being in the upper grades, is among the brighter children. To be specific: \when the last grammar grade is reached, only 40 per cent of the pupils entering school are left. AS stated, this 40 per cent represents the brighter element. An elimination of a third of these represents a greater loss to society than does the same numerical loss lower down in the grades. It is likewise true that the most of those eliminated in the higher grades are not so gifted as the verv few who stay still longer. Since the interests of the young are constantly widening as they ascend the grades, it is increasingly difficult for the school to meet their needs. The stronger the pupil the stronger will outside interests appeal to him and attract him away from the pursuit of studies in which he has comparatively little interest. Hence, during this time, among those who will be the first to leave school on any pretext will be many who would, with proper training, become in uential leaders in society. But for want of it they are too often subjected to the deadening in uence of the treadmill of the factory and the shop and lose all the ambition they once had for improvement. Specimen Junior High School Programs of Study (Classic Reprint) Mar 11 2022

Excerpt from Specimen Junior High School Programs of Study Kindly send me copies of junior high-school programs of study or tell me where I may Obtain copies Of such programs is the content Of numerous letters received by the Bureau Of Education. In order that these requests may be granted, this lea?et, which contains 25 programs Of study selected from those on file in this Office, has been prepared. Four Of the programs included are the work of State departments of public instruction and 21 of city school depart ments. The programs may be considered typical Of those in use in both the smaller and larger cities in various sections of the country. A comparison of the 25 programs reveals the fact that while no two are exactly alike, certain principles are fairly well adhered to. One is that the first junior high-school year, or at least the first half of that year, should be a transition or an adjustment period and that for this reason the courses should be a continuation Of the elementary courses but presented from a new viewpoint. Some schools, however, Offer electives in the first junior high-school year. Of the 25 school systems represented, 15 offer electives in the first year, 22 in the second, and 25 in the third. Old-Time Schools and School-Books (Classic Reprint) Nov 19 2022 Excerpt from Old-Time Schools and School-Books The contrast between the dainty picture books that are provided to entice the school children of the present along the paths of knowledge, and the sparsely illustrated volumes conned by the little folk of two or three generations ago, is very great; and yet the old books seemed beautiful to the children then, and the charm all comes back when a person of middle age or beyond happens on one of these humble friends of his youth. What an aroma of the far-gone days of childhood hovers in the yellow pages! The scenes in the schoolroom rise in the memory, one is young again, and has in gentle illusion the same feelings and the same juvenile companions as of old. Contributions to Education, Vol. 1 Nov 07 2021 Excerpt from Contributions to Education, Vol. 1: Isolation in the School Every state and territory in the United States has a system of free schools. The attitude of the American people toward education is evidenced by this general establishment of schools and the liberal provision for their support. The influence of this attitude on education itself has been twofold: its function and scope have been enlarged; its intrinsic value and prestige have been questioned. The inadequacy of the old conception of education to meet the demands and the doubts has become such a prolific source of disquietude and dissatisfaction that ere long a new one must needs be constructed. The new standard, with its adaptation to social and economic conditions, bids fair to be the dominant factor in the social product of the future. Manual for High School (Classic Reprint) Apr 12 2022 Excerpt from Manual for High School The high school is ideally suited to this purpose. It has charge of our youth during the years of adolescence - the most impressionable period of their lives - the period when, above all others, they are forming their habits of thought and feeling in all their social relations. It attracts the ambitious youth of the community, from whose number will come practically all of the doctors, lawyers, preachers, teachers, editors, publicists, and leading business men. It includes also representatives of every future vocation and of every future social, economic, and political group. It is an institution which readily arouses the social consciousness and enlists the personal and group loyalty of its members. Its curriculum can include such study of man and of his social nature as will contribute to an intellectual understanding of the social laws that must control in individual and group relationships. Its community activities provide for the development of emotional sanity and of practical skill in the process of cooperative activity. How to Organize, Classify and Teach a Country School (Classic Reprint) May 13 2022

Excerpt from How to Organize, Classify and Teach a Country School There are many good books on the subject of teaching, but they do not get into the hands of rural school-teachers very generally - first, because of the expense, second, because the larger works seem too elaborate. The aim throughout the following pages has been to put what I had to say in the fewest words possible. I have written this little book in a hope that it may do some good, if in no other way than by leading teachers to study works of merit on methods of teaching. School History of Berks County in Pennsylvania (Classic Reprint) Aug 24 2020 Excerpt from School History of Berks County in Pennsylvania The author of this book compiled "The History of Berks County," and in 1885 caused it to be published in a royal octavo volume of 1200 pages. Immediately afterward, certain teachers of our public schools suggested to him the utility of compiling a history for the use of the schools, in order to enable the children of the county to acquire special knowledge of their own locality, in which they were mostly interested, as well as general knowledge of this entire country and of foreign countries. It was believed that in this way they would be led to read of and investigate matters and things in the surrounding country with which they were now, or would shortly become, more immediately connected, and also to exercise their perceptive faculties in their daily school life, rather than their imagination; from which they could then be led, as inclination or necessity might dictate, into larger divisions of territory and into more comprehensive knowledge, after their faculties had become sufficiently matured to be interested in them, and more especially to understand them; and it was further believed that knowledge of this kind, thus acquired, would develop a tendency to acquire general historical knowledge.
